I wonder where those crabs are going?

'Brrrr-rup!' squawks his mama.
'He's a nosy one.'

I wonder what's under that jetty?

'Brrrr-rup!' squawks his dada.
'Where do you think you're going?'

I wonder what's making all that noise?

Sidney flaps his little flippers.
He slaps his little feet.

He waddles to the edge of the rock ledge ...

Sidney is still lost. He is still afraid.

But in the warm van, and with his rescuers making soothing sounds,
Sidney calms and his curiosity begins to spark again.

I wonder where we're going?

I wonder what's down

this big hill?

...our rooms echo empty.
Mouse, can't you sleep?

Even the monster under my bed has fled.
Tomorrow, we leave too.

I go everywhere
in our big red chair

The best place to be

A tent in the Sahara
A schooner ^{at sea} under sail with a biscuit in the blanket

My place of quiet
when I'm not really sick

My palace of dreams

My fortress on days I would rather not talk stars.

and that time I scare myself
when mum was upstairs

Gerontius the flying Giraffe

who unexpectedly grew wings

From here up high she can see what goes where and who is going to miss their train

Knocks off chimney pots

statues in the squares wear protective covers to keep off the winter snow.

Liz once had a job dusting dinosaurs at London's Natural History Museum. Since then, she has illustrated lots of picture books, mostly in her former home of Australia where she lived for ten years. Her artwork has attracted numerous accolades, and 'Dry to Dry' awarded Non-Fiction Picture Book of the Year in 2021. With a massive passion for drawing, Liz won the Orange Beak Shirley Hughes Sketchbook Prize 2025. Now living in Cambridge, England, Liz continues to create much-loved books and is writing her own illustrated stories. Her self-authored picture book 'Hand to Hand' is published by Walker Books Australia in June 2026. Liz is Illustrator Coordinator for SCBWI England Midlands & East Anglia and a member of Society of Authors.
